Description of services: "Currently, the child care program serves children as young as six weeks through 12 years of age. All programs stress an educational component, and the center's preschool program is licensed by the Pennsylvania Department of Education. The Preschool Program operates during the summer as well, unlike conventional preschools. Certified teachers plan a variety of experiences for the preschoolers during this time, where the atmosphere is a little more relaxed, yet continues to provide a structured daily routine.

DCDC also continues to provide early intervention services to children birth through two years of age. This home-based program utilizes an educational based model to help children who may be experiencing developmental delays or have a special need. Qualified teachers and licensed therapists work with the children and their families to make the most of these important first years of their lives. This service is usually at no cost to families and is covered by their health insurance or by medical assistance."
